GLOBAL CRISIS

US Fed sees prolonged recession

LONDON—GLOBAL ECONOMIC misery spread on Thursday as the Federal Reserve predicting a US recession will last 2009, Japan's exports slumping for the first time in seven years, companies cutting more jobs and investors dumping stocks.

The dropping worldwide economic also saw the International Monetary Fund (IMF) leading a $102.5-billion rescue package for Ireland. The fund's latest estimate was that Ireland's GDP will be as much as $40 billion smaller by the end of 2009.

Prospects, however, faded for a $25-billion bailout of American's three beleaguered auto-makers—General Motors, Ford and Chrysler. Secretary of the World Bank, Jim Yong Kim, said:

General Motors underlined its troubles by announcing a two-month production shutdown in Thailand. In Japan, Honda Motor said it would lay off 1,400 contract workers—the latest in a series of successive job cuts by Japanese automakers.

The French carmaker, PSA Peugeot Citroën, also said it would cut 2,700 jobs. Bids

Traders see gloomiest Christmas since 2001

By Doris C. Dumlao

THIS MAY TURN OUT TO BE the gloomiest Christmas holiday season since the Philippines was gripped by political turmoil after the death of Joseph Estrada in 2001.

Amid a global economic crisis, businesses in the country are expecting the worst fourth quarter in seven years, according to the latest quarterly business confidence survey of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP).

For the fourth quarter, the confidence index stood at 45.6 percent, reflecting the uneasy business Christmas season.

However, the index improved from the 42.9 percent index in the third quarter as the peak of the Wall Street shakeout that saw the collapse of investment banking giant Lehman Brothers, the fire-sale of Merrill Lynch and the near-bankruptcy of insurance giant AIG.

"It's slightly higher compared to last quarter although the index remained negative," Bangko Sentral Director Dumlao said at a press briefing yesterday.

The improvement this fourth quarter was due to the softening of oil prices, expectations of higher demand during the

Poll says most Filipinos expect hard times in '09

MOST FILIPINOS (87 PERCENT) expect the quality of life of their countrymen to deteriorate in the coming year, when the global economy is expected to slip into recession, results of a survey conducted last month showed.

"Both at the personal and national levels," 44 percent of the respondents said they were expecting their quality of life next year to be worse than now, according to Pulse Asia.

About half of Filipinos (49 percent) believe that the current US financial crisis "will have a great impact" on the Philippine economy.

Most of them feel the crisis would have "disastrous consequences" for Filipinos in general (75 percent) and for their own families (63 percent). Pulse Asia said yesterday in a statement.

Big Makri's businessmen believe that the Philippine economy will slide into recession next year and the unemployment rate to shoot up, but Philippine government officials expect a slowdown.

150 solons have signed Cha-cha resolution

By Gil C. Cabanigan Jr.

A MOVE TO AMEND the Constitution is gathering steam in the House of Representatives with President Macapagal-Arroyo's eldest son leading a signature drive to convene a constituent assembly (Con-ass) that would likely keep her in power beyond 2010.

Pamponga Puy Jr., son of Miguel "Biboy" Arroyo's campaign has secured between 120 and 130 signatures on a resolution calling on the Senate and the House to amend the 1987 Constitution by voting jointly and not separately, according to Puy Jr.

"I was approached by Congressman Makri last week when I was on duty in the Senate hall. He requested that I sign and when I looked at the paper, this

Colombian gets first windpipe transplant with stem cells

LONDON—A COLOMBIAN WOMAN has received the world's first tailor-made trachea transplant, given by sending a donor organ with her own stem cells to prevent her body rejecting it, an international research team reported on Wednesday.

The success of the operation, performed in Rome, using tissue generated from the woman's own bone marrow, raises the prospect that transplanting other organs may be possible without drugs to dampen the immune system, according to the researchers.

Doctors work hard to match donor type when transplanting organs so that the body does not completely reject the new organ, but patients usually have to take immunosuppressants for the rest of their lives.

"The probability this lady will have a rejection is almost zero percent," Dr. Paolo Macchiarini, head of thoracic

Noli: GMA will step down in 2010

Die T3-Menge

VICE PRESIDENT NOLU DE CASTRO REturns President Managua's message in action about stopping down what her term ends in June 2010, and is meeting close of the day in a 2010/2011 term.

"I believe she's stepping down," he says, who is reportedly being groomed to take administration's marching-beats in the 2010 presidential election, said yesterday. "She has served nine years and she has proved her worth."

He added: "She will follow the Commission. The support for Charter change is an entirely mature. But it doesn't mean she will stay in power."

In Green speaks at the Carbon Control Congress in Climate Change in Malindi, where he outlined the government's actions to address the impact of a warming climate on the country, such as the rise in sea levels.

Prime Minister Jean Dumas's sudden resignation for a longer stay in prison of the President at last Tuesday's Cabinet meeting has set off speculations that Mubarek was keen on extending his term beyond

Education Secretary Richard Riley tried to squash the speculations by saying that the President would step down in 2001, and distance himself from any move to amend the Constitution to extend his term.

Boone had splinted for the years, but instead it wasn't a pitch for Charter change.

Secretary Helenius Hwang, Presidential Advisor on Global Warming and Climate Change and vice president of the Labor Administration, meets with the President.

Proof that the President was quitting office in 2012 was the economic program, which the administration crafted to serve as his legacy, he said.

8. HUSBAND SAFE AND HOME FOR Christmas

Cannizzo's husband, Peter L. Monie Cannizzo, was abducted by coconspirators while on Van 7 in Comanche Valley almost two weeks ago.

As Camp agonizedly pondered where she sought the help of Delaware Secretary Elliott Weaver N. Marvel made this not-hiliplos: "I am appealing to the people who are now holding me back to please release him immediately. Let my husband's freedom be this Christmas gift to me."

The military has said that Gammage, company commander of the 1st Army's 11th Special Forces Company of the 1st Special Forces, was being held by rebels at the end of a two-day mission in Jilka Maguay in Mindanao area.

It added that the New People's Army (NPA) killed Gammage, building Gammage in surprise but later confirmed it after witnesses said they saw an unidentified member of NPA, who killed Gammage and his fellow soldiers.

AFF won't negotiate
The Philippine Army on Monday appealed for the soldiers' immediate return, but said it would not negotiate with the rebels.

AFP spokesman Lt. Col. Francois "Toussaint" said that the military had other "interests" to ensure the success of Cameroonian activity. "But we will never negotiate with terrorism," he added. "We are, of course, giving a high premium to Lt. Cameroonian's salary in the conduct of our operations, but this will not stop us from going after those who are responsible for the attack."

Camargo's family, including his mother and brother, met with Pinochet upon the advice of Spanish-born Hondurans. Mural said Pinochet had assured her that the military would "do everything" to bring back Camargo to his family without doing the usual from Oct. 14 to Oct. 27, using face-to-face interviews with a nationwide probability sample of 1,280 adults. It had a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

"I know you have a heart, and I hope you understand that it is very difficult to be pregnant without your husband by your side," she writes, according to Teen magazine's advice.

US financial crisis

The survey found that most Filipinos (69 percent) were aware of the US financial crisis. Across areas and classes, awareness of the US crisis ranged from 55 percent to 79 percent.

Among those who were aware, 64 percent (65 percent to 75 percent) across all areas and classes believed that the crisis may have a great impact on the Philippine economy.

Global economy

Those who believe the US crisis would be disruptive to the entire Philippine range from 76 percent to 85 percent, while those who believe it would have adverse repercussions to only own families range from 53 percent to 64 percent.

Gains, losses

The survey asked respondents to complete the following sentence: "Compared to the past 12 months, can you say that your way of life now is..." and "Compared to the past 12 months, can you say that the way of life of most Filipinos now is..." and were asked to choose from the responses: "better now," "same as then" and "worse now."

Those who answered "better now" were referred to as "gainers," while those who answered "worse now" were referred to as "losers."

The nationwide survey in October found that compared with the previous month, most Filipinos now consider themselves to be losers—down 76 percent to 58 percent, a decrease of 17 percentage points.

However, in terms of their personal quality of life in the coming year since the start of the crisis, 44 percent in October.

Optimism about the quality of life of most Filipinos in the year ahead is 47 percent, while about those in every loss (76 percent) think that most Filipinos are also "losers" now compared to a year ago.

Polio Ato said their was "hardly any movement" in the national quality of life this year compared with last year. The percentage of those who think that most Filipinos are losers went down from 84 percent in July to 76 percent in October.

The survey also found that a "big majority" of Filipinos (79 percent) considered the national economy to have deteriorated in the past three years, but also noted a decline in the percentage of Filipinos saying the national economic situation "is worse now than in 2005," from 68 percent in July.

"Among the majority saying the state of the national economy has worsened in the past three years, 77 percent strongly felt, 21 percent somewhat felt and only 2 percent did not feel the impact of the economic crisis on their families," Polio Ato said.

PISEM for projects spent

A ₱1,651.7-million community-driven projects accounting for ₱150 million have so far been implemented this year in Eastern Visayas, one of the country's poorest regions.

There were implemented under the Rapid Response to Suburgent Comprehensive and Integrated Delivery of Social Services (R2SDI-CDSO), which is the government's latest poverty reduction program for the "poorest of the poor" provinces.

In Eastern Visayas alone, 237 projects totaling ₱448.7 million have been implemented since January until mid-November this year, according to Neil Miranda, R2SDI-CDSO regional-level monitoring officer.

The faster R2SDI program encourages barangay residents to identify projects that their communities need, design their own projects and make the decisions on how to use resources.

that the Ati were the earliest workers on the island. They were displaced and driven away starting in the 1970s when the island started receiving tourists.

At least 40 Ati families have been living in a new housing lot in San Mateo, in Barangay Sabang, one of the three villages of the island.

But they reportedly faced threats of eviction from the community which tried to take away the land from the families of Ati Rep. Philippine Representative and Senator Yap.

The community had received several promises for a permanent relocation site, including those made by former president Joseph Estrada and President Benigno Aquino III, but none have been implemented.

Perlas said the NCIP would set up the first division office on the island, which was located in San Mateo, in Barangay Sabang.

Bishop urges paradigm shift to achieve peace

CORONADO CITY—A CATHOLIC BISHOP in Mindanao yesterday said there was a need for a paradigm shift among politicians and government officials for peace talks to succeed in Mindanao.

"We have to sacrifice some of our old mind-sets, old paradigms," said Bishop Jose Ochoa Regalado, auxiliary bishop of the Archdiocese of Cebu.

Regalado said he believes that peace talks should be the only way to peace in our country and not to negotiate the other side of the coin," he said in a statement in connection with the celebration of the 10th-anniversary of the start of the peace talks in Manila, which runs from Dec. 20 to Dec. 30.

Without addressing a particular group, Regalado also warned that "violence will just multiply by itself and we will never see this peace in our country."

He said dialogue is one way of finding a solution.

"First and foremost, let us sit down and talk and let's forget about violence. Let's forget about other means of achieving peace because the only way to peace is peace itself," Regalado said.

"It is through the heart of everyone that we can spread the peace. Let us be open and explore possibilities where we can live together, work together and achieve our own peaceful way of living together," he said.

Church drafts own RH bill

ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOPS IN THE PHILIPPINES are drafting their own version of a bill on natural health care, rejecting a pending bill that also promotes artificial contraception.

Bishop Martin Garcia of the Episcopal Commission on Family and Life said yesterday that the bishops have been working with lawmakers in draft an act to ensure the population can still prosper in the face of reproductive.

"It should not be inhibited in a church bill," Garcia said during a meeting in Manila. "There are no many Catholics who are willing to support the bill and the church is only helping draft it."

Garcia said the bishops have rejected the current bill in Congress, something he said is constitutional and infringing on religious rights of about 90 percent of the population, which is mostly Catholic.

"We would not allow a legislature that would allocate money from a majority of the taxpayers who are Catholics to be allocated to a program which is against their beliefs," he said, adding to provide that promote artificial contraception.

The Philippines is already the world's 14th most populous country and is projected to have a population of over 140 million by 2040, putting a huge strain on the existing health system, schools and other services, and its ability to feed itself.

The bill on natural health care, which requires the government to promote artificial contraception if it becomes law, has become a faultline between the powerful church and activists.

Some bishops have said they will release statements and call for amendments to politicians who support the bill.

In letters, a larger working with Catholic bishops and the church would oppose any attempt through legislation that would include "parenting rights and the freedom to live one's life."

She said the church supports reproductive rights in the proposed law on natural health care, including the promotion of breast feeding, but pointed out that Filipino mothers were not only dying due to childbirth, but also of tuberculosis and cancer.

She said there had been no serious studies that some reproductive rights would be jeopardized and improper use of emergency contraceptives and pregnancies.

From Lina, head of a church-based lobby group, and Catholic bishops also opposed the pending bill because it would promote the use of pills and condoms, which are less readily available than the current law. It is a 24-hour emergency service.

Pirates seize 7 more RP seamen

By Cecilia B. Batana

SEVEN PHILIPPINE SEAMEN HAVE BEEN added to the growing number being held hostage by pirates off Somalia since the International Maritime Bureau declared piracy in the Gulf of Aden region as being "out of control."

The Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) yesterday said the seven Filipinos were part of the 21 crew of the Hong Kong cargo ship Delight managed by Hong Shipping Lines. The ship, which was carrying 26,000 metric tons of wheat, was headed for the Indian port of Mumbai, India when it was hijacked on Nov. 10.

DFA Undersecretary Glenn Ordoñez said the seven seamen were reportedly unharmed. He said the embassies in Nairobi, Mauritius and Freetown have been instructed to coordinate with the ship's owners and the international maritime authorities for the safe release of the hostages and for reward.

Pirates hit

The pirates are said to be holding the crew and the ship in an area near the port of Mombasa, the maritime police said in northern Somalia.

The ship's other crew members are from Iran, Indonesia, India and Cyprus.

There are now 120 Filipino seamen from seven different vessels being held by pirates. The other hijacked ships with Filipino crew members are the German, seized on Sept. 26 with 26 Filipinos; Capri, hijacked on Sept. 27, with 10 Filipinos; Seafarer, Oct. 17, 21; Irish Strength, Nov. 10, 22; Tianjin 8, Nov. 14, 3; Victor first, Nov. 15, 18; and Champlain first, Nov. 16, 14.

The DFA, the Manila Composite-based international maritime watchdog body, has reported that Somali pirates have attacked 80 ships this year, more than double the incidents in 2007. Pirates are all holding 18 ships and more than 230 seamen.

Since the start of the year, 17 vessels with 201 Filipino seamen have been seized by pirates, but 10 of the vessels and 70 seamen have been released.

About a third, or 200,000 of the world's maritime seamen, come from the Philippines.

Gov't helpless

Greater reliance, the DFA notes, the director for migrant workers at sea, said there seemed to be very little the government can do to solve the problem.

Not President Noli de Castro, the presidential adviser on overseas Filipino workers, has said it would be difficult to have seamen from working in dangerous waters near Somalia as the seamen are not allowed to leave the ship. This is the most convenient and less expensive route.

In Castro said the government has decided the Gulf of Aden is a risk zone and pure seamen the option whether to disembark from a ship if it is passing through the zone or not and get their compensation denied.

The Gulf of Aden controls access to the Red Sea, which connects the Mediterranean Sea and the Red Sea and allows ships to leave Europe, Africa and Asia without having to take the longer and more expensive route around the southern tip of Africa. It is a crucially important zone for oil supply.

The World Maritime Union Organization, the United States and a number of European nations have all sent ships to the region to stop the piracy, but to no avail.

Councilor wants pupils banned from cybercafés

By Beverly T. Natividad

A MALABON LAUGHAGERS is asking to ban schoolchildren from going into Internet cafés during school hours.

Malabon first district councilor Jesus Linao Venable is proposing to regulate the business activities of Internet and computer-based establishments after noting that young students are often able to go to such places to surf the net and play online games.

In his proposed ordinance, the young schoolchildren aged 18 years and below is to be prohibited from entering Internet cafés from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday to Friday.

"An Internet computer-based activities like operations of computer games centers that greatly affect the students' studies and other endeavors," the proposed law said.

Owners and proprietors of computer-based establishments who will violate the proposed ordinance will face between P5,000 to P10,000 in fines, depending on the frequency of the violation.

An Internet café owner who will violate the prohibition for three times will have his business permit cancelled.

However, law also deemed it necessary to apply fines to students who will be found in violation of the Internet café law.

First-time student offenders will be brought to their parents or school authorities for proper action. Second and third offenders will be stopped with a fine ranging from P200 to P500 or a temporary community service.

The proposed ordinance will depend on the local police and barangay officials for effective implementation.

The first public hearing on the proposed ordinance was held last week and drew support mostly from teachers.

Flea mart clogs Baclaran road

By Mike Florio

THE BACLARAN FLEA MARKET MAY BE BACKSLAPING both sides with the holidays around the corner but it has earned the ire of some residents of the surrounding town.

Because the makeshift stalls in the market have been clogging the main road leading to Marikina-Chorac.

In fact, the Metro Manila Development Authority had earlier closed Rodriguez to avoid of roadway due to overflowing these shantytowns and pavements.

In an interview, Rod Capala, a pastor at Baclaran Church, criticized officials of the barangay and the city government for the mess the flea market has spawned in front of the church.

"I don't understand why the barangay and the city government allowed these vendors to sell their wares in a residential road," Capala said over the telephone.

He claimed that some members of the police and of Barangay Baclaran were benefiting from the "illegal" flea market, a claim later refuted by a barangay official.

Capala said he was able to get a copy of a message that purportedly came from the city government when a tourist paid P20,000 for a stall measuring two square meters.

"The fee was called 'goodwill' money," Capala said. "Aside from this, there are people from the barangay who go around the market to collect P200 daily from stall operators."

In a separate interview, barangay administrator Rolando Galin discussed the allegations and admitted the flea market has been an "old, recurring problem."

"I don't know anything about these supposed collections as far as the barangay and the city government are concerned," said Galin, who said to be barangay captain of Baclaran for 13 years. "We can't force vendors who we call an 'informal' which costs P50 to P100 depending on the size of the stall."

Galin said the fee is sanctioned by the city government and they get letters for the stallholders from the city treasury.

US carmakers' rescue stalls in Senate

GM, Ford, Chrysler warn of collapse of auto industry, loss of 3M jobs

WASHINGTON—A PLAN TO GIVE TROUBLED US automakers billions of dollars in government-backed loans is on ice, leaving the fate of hundreds of thousands of workers and Detroit's once-venerable car companies hanging in the balance.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid worried plans on Wednesday for a bill to give $15 billion in new state guaranty loans out of the $700-billion Wall Street rescue fund. The Bush administration and congressional Republicans have rejected Reid's plan to dip into that pot of money.

Warning of economic disaster, a bipartisan group of senators from auto industry states are trying to reach a deal on an alternative package. If an agreement can't be reached, Reid said the Senate will vote on it as part of a measure to extend federal benefits.

The leaders of General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler LLC painted a grim picture of their financial position during meetings of congressional leadership, warning that the collapse of the auto industry could lead to the loss of 3 million jobs. Detroit's automakers, hurt by a slump deep in sales and a nearly broken credit market, burned through nearly $18 billion in cash reserves during the last quarter, and GM and Chrysler bank said they could collapse in weeks.

"I don't believe we have the luxury of not acting," GM CEO Rick Wagoner told a House hearing.

Meanwhile, the CEO of Ford Motor Co. said the company had sufficient cash reserves to make it through 2009, but United States Motors sales president Ken Gernschatz and a bankruptcy creditor spokeswoman.

"It's either a Chapter 11 (the use of the companies), it will drag at least one other with them, if not all of them, and I don't believe Chapter 11 is where it will end. It will go to liquidation," he said cautiously.

Automakers ran into more constraints from House lawmakers, who chastised the industry for fighting tougher fuel-efficiency standards in the past and questioned their use of private jets while at the same time seeking government handouts.

"My fear is that you're going to take this money and continue the same rapid decisions you've made for 25 years," said Rep. Bill Good Latham, a Missouri Republican Democrat.

The stakes are high. The Detroit automakers employ nearly a quarter million men, women, and about two 750,000 other workers produce materials and parts that go into cars. Alone, I will lose on top of that work in downstream automotive, if just one of the automakers declared bankruptcy, some estimates put US job losses next year as high as 2.5 million.

The White House and congressional Republicans have called on Democrats to support a Republican plan to direct a $25-billion loan program created by Congress in September—designed to help the companies develop more fuel-efficient vehicles—as one that also can grant immediate financial needs.

Rep. Carl Levin, a Michigan Democrat, along with Republican Sen. Al Franken of Minnesota and Georgia Governor of Ohio are trying to broker an alternative that would provide bridge loans or a guarantee that the fuel-efficiency loan had already been repaid.

Republicans were discussing a scaled-down aid package of $5 billion to $8 billion to help the companies survive through year-end.

But it was unclear whether any program could be made. Democrats strongly oppose letting the car companies tap into the money loan for short-term cash needs.

Despite the gridlock in Congress, there could be a contingency plan: a return to Wall Street in December for another bond auction seems to try to stave it off.

House Majority Leader Nancy Pelosi noted that automakers leaders were planning to gather for an economic conference the week of Dec. 5. "That is unrealistic," she said. "The year has not ended."

At the center of the human process of learning is a genuine love for the individual child.

Only when you open your heart to the child, and the child opens his heart to you, can the process of learning begin. This is the heart of the Kumon method, developed by the late Dr. Shigeo Kumon, a pioneer in the field of mathematics education. The method is based on the principle that every child has the potential to learn, and that the key to unlocking this potential is a genuine love for the child.

Today, over 10,000 Kumon centers in 40 countries are helping children of all ages to achieve their full potential in mathematics. The Kumon method is a proven, effective way to help children learn, and it is the heart of the Kumon system.

In the Philippines, Kumon has been helping children of all ages to achieve their full potential in mathematics for over 20 years. The Kumon method is a proven, effective way to help children learn, and it is the heart of the Kumon system.

Japanese ace shows Patrimonio the door

By Marc Anthony Reyes

TOP SEED SHACHA JONES OF NEW ZEALAND and last week's champion Larissa Tinanua of Indonesia are on collision course while top Filipina hope Anna-Christina Patrimonio reached the end of the line yesterday in the PDI's Group 1FF women's tennis event 2 at the Rizal Memorial Tennis Center.

Jones began to make up for her second round upset last week after beating Australian Bianca Beato, 6-3, 6-4, while Tinanua beat her 6-3, 7-6 (12), 6-2, in a straight set quarterfinal showdown today.

Beato began her match on the 16-year-old daughter of Filipino basketball legend Alvin Patrimonio, who gallantly fought back and defeated Tinanua before jolting a 7-5, 6-3 decision.

Patrimonio, who was the best performing local player in the second round, ended a 5-3 lead in the first set after breaking her 23-year-old sister's in the eighth game.

She continued leading the pressure during the game which lasted for one hour and 31 minutes.

"I'm still happy with my performance considering that it's my first time in quality in the main draw," said Patrimonio, 31, whose family descended on her from the sidelines.

Patrimonio, who started playing at age 10, has competed in several events in Spain and Portugal early this year, represented on National's two double leads to win the 10th game and score one game day of winning the set.

But the Japanese, winner of 31 women's tennis Grand Slam tournaments and six Olympic medals, broke Patrimonio's momentum in the third set. But on the half and answer on her own terms, Patrimonio took the set with a cold and methodical two-game.

Patrimonio took the upper hand in the second set, breaking Beato's momentum in the second game and holding her in the third for a 3-1 lead. But Tinanua held her own with another two-game and broke her soon after Patrimonio double-broke.

Patrimonio closed back to double break in the fourth set, but the new three games to watch into the quarterfinal against Indonesian Amy Rospige, former singles and doubles player, 6-1, 6-2, to advance.

Patrimonio's Dutch began around the lower half of the draw after pulling through from the second round. She defeated China's 6-2, 6-2. She will meet last week's runner-up Amy Rospige in the quarterfinal of Indonesia, 6-1, 6-1 after defeating China's 6-2, 6-2.

UN unit seeks solution to world hunger

By Jerry H. Brown

THE UN FOOD AND AGRICULTURE ORGANIZATION (FAO) has urged member states to take action to avert a new global food crisis by 2015 and find a way to feed 9 billion people by 2050.

FAO director general Jacques Di Giori said the organization has addressed a special session on food security and rural development in Rome, Italy, to discuss the world's food crisis.

"We must ensure the present system that generates world food insecurity is not only a crisis of food security, but also a crisis of social justice," Di Giori said.

Di Giori said the world's food crisis is not only a crisis of food security, but also a crisis of social justice. He said the world's food crisis is not only a crisis of food security, but also a crisis of social justice.

US bank says RP may profit from global crisis

Neda: Budget can't be balanced by '10

By Michelle R. Neda

ECONOMIC PLANNING Secretary Ralph Neda said the government would not be able to balance its budget by 2010.

According to Neda's testimony, the government will post a budget deficit equivalent to 0.5 to 1 percent of the country's gross domestic product in 2010.

He explained that since the government would allow for a budget deficit of as much as P50 billion next year—equivalent to 1.2 percent of the estimated GDP for 2009—it would then be difficult for the government to wipe out the budget by 2010.

In a hearing held at the Third National Economic and Development Authority office in Pasig City yesterday, Neda said the government's decision to adjust next year's deficit ceiling to P50 billion, from P40 billion, was necessary to allow the Philippines to weather the impact of a global recession projected next year.

In his testimony, Neda said the government's decision to adjust next year's deficit ceiling to P50 billion, from P40 billion, was necessary to allow the Philippines to weather the impact of a global recession projected next year.

Neda said the government's P1.4 trillion national budget for 2009 would add 2 percentage points to the Philippines' growth. Combined with the private sector's contribution, he said, the government could attain its 2009 economic growth target of between 5.7

Marketing landscape in gloomy times

By Karen V. de Asis
Contributor

IN A GLOOMY ECONOMIC scenario, consumer attitudes and behaviors are expected to change. Businesses are likewise expected to adjust to these changes.

Marketers cannot operate the same way they did in robust times. The market becomes a buyers market and competition becomes even more cutthroat.

Today's economic downturn is nearly the same as the 1930s Great Depression that hit the US but its scale and impact is much larger and more adverse. This is because 34 percent of the world's GDP is from the US and many developed, developing and emerging markets rely on the US for trade. In the 1930s, global trade and financing dried up as the scale today was virtually nonexistent.

Scenario-marketers face

Following are potential landscapes in an economic downturn that marketers need to be aware of:

Consumer versus expenditure. Marketers and businesses need to review their performance and operations with more detail. While operations can happen even in an economic downturn, marketers must objectively and cautiously assess the demand side of the equation. Nonperforming assets or facilities need to be identified or liquidated quickly.

High and sustained demand product and service lines need to be supported, if not built even more strongly. Close to the line is how to coordinate more investments in new, even cash-generating products or services. Rebuilding your core product's glory into new markets is also where demand has been identified. Question mark products may have hidden opportunities after careful assessment.

Brand versus commodity. A buyer market happens when consumers become more cautious about the money they spend, when the level of demand and buying power has been drastically reduced, when there is far more supply than the market can sell and when buying power is expected to spread. Companies like down are opportunistic for brands that have never lost, spend building the trust and goodwill of consumers. In downturns, consumers are likely to support reputable brands with more flexible value messaging and sell off their generally cutbacks.

Potential scenarios

Consumer versus expenditure
Marketing versus strategy
Brand versus commodity
System versus product
Product, promotion, price, place
Market focus
Words vs. real action
How vs. what of how
Expenditure versus income
Intelligent products and services
Integrated vs. non-integrated message generally home.

Optimistic growth/shift in the product, potential consumers. When money easily flows in, credit is widely available and there is more disposable cash, consumers are generally more optimistic to spend and keep. When people have to hang on to their jobs and are fearful of being unemployed, and businesses are skeptical about consumer spending, consumer confidence is spread is compromised. Marketers face a challenging task to move consumers from their line of spending to buying and consuming goods and services that are perceived as helpful or valuable even in their present mood state.

Brand versus focus. Marketing objectives have to be realistic and measurable in times of crisis. Consequently, use of marketing money must be more efficient and hard-working. There must be an assessment of the brand's objectives and target market—in the brand as a brand building phase and then, increasingly general awareness—used to create or to maintain sufficiently attractive among target consumers that it becomes more efficient to concentrate solely on the target market.

Media versus retail space. Integrated marketing communications including advertising via media and the retail store are complementary and very much implemented in tandem. But when there is an economic crunch and money supply is tight, business strategy must be prioritized. Media aims to capture consumer awareness and create word-of-mouth buzz as a product or service. This involves being part of the user's solution rather than the consumer's shopping list. Retail advertising is meant to disrupt the consumer's planned purchase and encourage impulse or trial purchase in the store. In downturns, mainstream consumers generally carry a list and their needs are made even before they enter the retail space.

Home versus out-of-home. Much has been said about the out-of-home retail space being the economic battleground. In times of tight money supply, people are naturally watchful of their expenses and investments are largely restricted. But who is not to say that the home cannot be an ideal place to indulge even in an economic crisis. As marketing had delivery value of, for example, in-home entertainment, do-it-yourself home spa, etc. can help sustain demand. In an economic crisis, the home is the next best alternative to indulge.

Economic substitutive versus indulgent products and services. Depending on an economic downturn, there is

'Isn't consumer insighting the same as market research and, therefore, just a rebranding of market research?'—I

There's the same and this is just a rebranding of market research to make it sound popular now that everybody is talking about consumer and market insights. So I asked our market research manager, who attended your market research seminar. After so many words, she was also unable to give an exact distinction between the two.

At an MAF (Management Association of the Philippines) meeting, I asked CEO friends and who also had sent (people) to your insighting seminars what their own definition was. While most did not actually say that they thought consumer insighting is the same as market research, they all couldn't tell the difference especially in terms of practical applications.

So will you please clarify and explain? Is it clear that you're referring to the same idea or's semantics. Is this a just a new MFA or rebranding?

Let's start by seeing the differences. There are similarities and differences between consumer insighting and market research. In essence of this word, saying that consumer insighting is not available, but we can close up this more of confusion by simply defining the specific areas of similarities and differences.

Similarities

We begin with the similarities. There are in the techniques used in insighting and in market research. Both use the same research techniques: DM (design, attitude, survey), FGD (focus group discussion), IDI (in depth interviewing), ethnographic (observational), project, testing, etc.

When about the difference? They lay in the analysis of the insights and the market research data, and in the use or use of those data.

An innovative way of understanding these differences is by looking at the time occurrence of insighting and market research. Consumer, for example, product research. Consumer insighting is for idea generation and when successfully undertaken yields the new product concept. Then if the customer wants to read the target consumer's reaction to the proposed product concept, it's called by market research via the product concept test.

However, when R&D or product development is asked to convert the product concept into a product prototype, then market research may be needed to find out if consumers will use the conversion of the concept into its physical and sensory product prototype form in service as intended for them. This is the idea behind the market research subset of product prototype testing.

So it can be said that consumer insighting usually comes before market research. Also, consumer insighting takes shape of opportunity search. Market research takes more after and works on the end of validating with the consumer the found opportunity.

New market insighting

You also mentioned consumer insighting and new market insighting. We should also take clear the difference between these two.

As to the preceding, we start with similarities. Both consumer insighting and new market insighting are about opportunity search. In the search, I conducted market as a marketing conference more 20 years ago about the topic in search. At that time, I called consumer insighting as consumer understanding research (CUR). In fact, which I was helping Indus Consumer Health Division set up a consumer research unit at its time, I misunderstood calling the work as "Consumer Understanding Research (CUR)" as the CURS. In fact, the acronym was meant to be consumer of its business. That was an approval. Instead the CURS option to the name, "Consumer Insighting Group" so to reading the question below, just substitute "insighting" for "understanding" and you'll see that those 20-year-old words of confusion is still relevant today.

When as we have creative, those displaying the consumer understanding skill early and even almost naturally. But most of us, who want to learn this skill, have to take the trouble and time for learning. In learning, the problem is how to avoid falling into the trap of insight and dimension skill of understanding, believing that there's just one way to understand consumers and ignoring the many good understanding methods and models. In essence, in any situation where you want to understand the consumer, two or more methods and models are always better than one.

The reason was necessary because at that time as well as at present, marketers believe that insighting is about a monopoly of their ad agency creative group and/or the company's R&D or product development people. Let agency executives never made any claim of owning the insighting skill. They just happened to be the more profile source of consumer insights. That was demonstrated by Henryk Ordoñez, vice head of Indonesia's Innovative Creative Division, in his calling of Jollibee's "Lumpang Lump" product and of positioning the lump, meat and meat mix, kinds are learning that if they wanted to, they themselves can learn and even master the insighting capability.

(Watch out for part 2 of this column next week.)

Luxury jewelry sales brighten up dim financescape

The most expensive, the P1 million, 14-karat necklace, an ornate with two elongated ovals, was quickly bought.

In fact, 2005 ended on a positive note. Bulgari's sales for the year were up 12 percent. The secret? New collections that were sold.

With the 2005 collection, he expects the figures to go higher.

"People are looking at jewelry as an investment. It does not fluctuate like real estate. It appreciates over time," he says. Bulgari estimates that the jewelry increases in value at least 10 percent every year.

"If you bought a Bulgari necklace 10 years ago, its equivalent value would cost you double."

Many of Bulgari's loyal customers are entrepreneurs. There's an emerging market of young business people eager to start a jewelry collection. Bulgari's top customers are lawyers, who hardly wear it, or artists, but are the first to place orders before the launch.

The peak season for jewelry acquisition is September-February. In December, boutiques choose presents for their sales. The biggest splurge is the end of the holiday season, when people finally indulge themselves after shopping for gifts.

Says Bulgari, "We attract a lot of people who appreciate the craftsmanship and quality of the piece. We also see other big sales comes. Design, construction, how it fits on your neck and wrist—that is what Bulgari is all about. If you ask for a 14-karat diamond, we don't have that in the Philippines. Our collection of handcrafted jewelry is meant to enhance the beauty of the person."

Beat water-retention weight gain and bulging

SO MANY THINGS CAN GO WRONG during your water retention weight gain and bulging.

Two days before heading for San Francisco to attend a film festival, my friend Denise Lardes grew was already struggling with a water retention (PMS), which meant no extra pounds to lose would mean my lower abdomen to puff up and my thighs to swell, dropping the gown up by the hip area would be impossible.

Applying 30 hours before the big event, my husband and I found our shoes and went back to the hotel to rest as a result of our bodies' water retention. But from the long plane ride and the need to adhere to the competition's changes.

Lucky for us both that the quick fix product for emergency body loss.

Both. The products below work best to shed weight gain caused by water retention. They also help those who must follow a couple of inches on certain areas. They will not work for those who are trying to separate themselves into a smaller dress size to start with. Be realistic!

For men

Try the Shikido Men Body Creamer Advanced Tanning Gel. It is applied only three times a week after showering. After use, the more your skin up with no other and with some fragrance.

It works best when massaged on the stomach and lower abdomen after dry and nighttime showers.

Unusable. It was very cold and the heat from the sun while so the stomach of course, it would swell up that much after five minutes.

It did not help that it was 10 P.M. on wedding day. After eating the buffet and drinking from the open bar, the stomach pulled right back.

Perhaps it would need a week of 1000cc-a-day use for the stomach to stay flatter longer.

PMS girl's routine

Kidnapping my cycle to fit right smack when the day of the New 8 wedding, which meant water weight gain, I created the routine in Manila.

I started every meal with fruit and ate high-fiber cereal for breakfast.

I also began a water-a-day routine late October applying Denise's Perfect Skin lower gel treatment to the legs, knees and thighs.

Afterwards, starting from the under going upwards, I applied Auroa Collagen as it contains body-holding moisture, including on the area covered by Perfect Skin but giving special attention to the stomach, arms and the area which needs special help to apply oil - the solution.

Here: Clarins's PMS, it means to be used like a cream so it needs something to keep it on a bit. You can use a flannel or dry just-cold water. Not a top.

For non-PMS women

You can put on Clarins Body Oil, especially for women who are not.

Apply starting from the ankles to the stomach as if you are putting on a support garter hose.

During the wedding, some of the women had the brilliant idea of wearing one to the bed to make sure their feet would not swell in the shoes meant to be comfortable.

Note: Clarins TBL is perfect for women who have PMS as well, but to make it work better, they may want to consider applying Clarins AOC Eau Oil after the evening shower.

If you do not want to make up to the night to use the bed room frequently, apply the AOC Eau Oil after the evening shower.

They will not only get rid of excess fluids and toxins but also needs to maintain, making the skin soft.

stayed up with us completely budget and were to spare. Their fit ranged from comfortable to very loose.

These treatments should be used twice a week for two weeks in night to yield best results. My tons were significantly shorter but results did not disappoint.

Beauty with a conscience

JOLIQUE, A BEAUTY BRAND FROM Australia is now open in Manila. It's an alternative beauty brand that believes beauty comes from beauty.

At present the leading green beauty brand in Australia, the alternative brand comes in four variants to take care of different skin types.

Its facial line consists of toner, non-performing moisturizers, eye cream, facial wash. The foundation is the replenishing spray.

Jolique is a beauty brand line from South Australia, which means everything is based on natural, green and hand-harvested.

Part of the proceeds from sales of Jolique products from November 27 to 30, 2006 will be given to charity - the Children's Environmental Awareness and Action Foundation, which supports teaching the youth about environmental awareness.

Shoes have replaced bags as 'It' item

Killer heels are today's design-statement items

By Mel Conner
Contributor

IN THE ECONOMIC SLOWdown, the fashion industry seems to have a more ironic view of the state of the world: audits piling in super-high heels, sneak on legs, several of the models were seen tripping in them.

Blame is not only on the price of handbags, or the proliferation of designer handbags, even perhaps when the daily trial calls "the Deynala effect." In this year's shows are making a statement of their own.

When fashion models emerged a few years ago (thanks to another style item, Kate Winslet), it was such a big hit that it spread every possible style and patterning. Even Christian Lacroix's philosophy to Hugoboss's women wear low-high sneakers.

Even Deynala calls an embedded pair for around P1,000.

And when sales of high heels skyrocketed in the 1990s, the fashion industry was almost seeing them as one of the high heels to another shoe, butting—it was a clear indication that the shoe-wearing, however would lead the spotlight from the "It" bag.

PING launches its custom fitting software

PING Golf, the pioneer in custom-fit golf equipment, has launched the rFLIGHT Custom Fitting Software. The rFLIGHT is a software system which can use PING's golf club data to properly fitting golfers of any skill level to come up with a golf set made up of items suited to their game's needs. It suggests the correct PING custom-fitting system which relies heavily on subjective visual fitting at the driving range. The rFLIGHT Custom Fitting Software is capable of recommending thousands of club combinations. It can show driver distance and dispersion of balls hit on the system's simulated range. It also includes ongoing analysis features that analyze data from three shots hit during a fitting session to give a hybrid an iron and a wedge to produce proper distance gaps between every club. Finally, removing the redundancy of golf clubs. Ball speed, launch angle, and spin rate are captured by a launch monitor and sent directly to the rFLIGHT software. Clubhead, shaft, and grip can be inputted. The numbers, as captured by the launch monitor, can be entered by 3-D graphics shown by the rFLIGHT which make it easier for the golfer to obtain during a fitting session. Moreover, the rFLIGHT also allows a golfer's current driver and the system's recommended PING driver.

At present, rFLIGHT fitting sessions can be accommodated at the PING Performance Center located on the 3rd floor of the Manila Golf Club, and soon at the Clubhouse Driving Range in Pang City and the SouthPoint Driving Range in Flarwest, Alabang. The PING Performance Center aims to highlight the benefits of PING custom club fitting. Properly fitted golf clubs are indeed superior and will be the long-term for more benefit in the golfer using golf clubs that are purchased off the rack.

Aside from such, the PING Performance Center showcases the entire line of PING golf products, from irons, drivers, hybrids, woods, hybrids, wedges, putters, bags, and accessories. The PING Performance Center also provides extra-fitting. For inquiries, please call Simon Regus at telephone 880-7064 or Jason Garcia at 842-9308.

Last Sunday, my 17-year-old daughter was asking me about water up. She wanted to know how deep her front-courtyard always had sand and fresh without having to lay ground in stone pits.

For a more witty-to-much going on, from lots of mild-mannered, attending nurses to simply bumping out with friends at the mall, I recommend using an old product that you came to all the wrong ladies-stands. It should also really fit in a small pouch I suggest using the Treasury Making-up Set by Cosmetics. It comes in a compact that has four lovely eye shadows, 7 shades of blush-on, and a glossed-on to perfect for cheeks and to seal the sensitive skin. It also comes with an applicator, a cheek and lip brush for a quick and easy application...all that in one compact!

Pre-regulated up look, the young ladies will surely love to see the Twinkly Eye Shadow set by Catrice. With two different shades to choose from, how can she go wrong? With all three colors, she can easily change her look from puppy, to girl-next-door, to a dark girl. All she has to do is swap a few shades across her eyelids and her eyes will instantly brighten up. The darker shades can also be used on the eye and eyebrows and the lips. And to top it off, it's still the darkest one!

He also says he's going to be hard-looking pretty and buying back all the time. With these new theories, there can't be any more, anywhere, without having to worry about damaging their country's life.

Creative clutter

'Marriage of the arts' best describes the Elizalde home

By Robert San Diego Jr.

BELLETRIA AND RADIO show host Liza Morales-Elizalde describes the Pearly City house she shares with husband Fred and kids Miley and Michael: "It has a crazy load of clutter."

It seems "creative clutter" is the main design principle, yet, to know the life of the Elizalde couple better, the house can also be described as 'A Marriage of the Arts.'

In one it boasts a floor-to-ceiling, white-wall display of paintings in an impressionistic style (photographs from Morales-Elizalde's career are also hung there by Elizalde—most of them inspired by his wife, he says).

His personal favorite is "Washed," it's also the title of a book they did in 2000, the occasion, the family is another reason, a book titled "This morning the river." It captured an eye-opening scene.

Other paintings were inspired by her performance, his "Guns" and "Red Dress Ball."

"His original look at the paintings that were sold in his art exhibit in 1999," Morales says. "He can really live to put with them."

In the main house, the only paintings are by Elizalde and his friends. Morales and other friends. One is by an unknown French painter.

Inspired with the paint art works are previous drawings by John, Jr. and Michael, Jr.

Elizalde notes that he is proud to hold art—than the 14th-century artwork came from Japan and the extensive collection of Buddha figures from all over the world.

Among sculptures of Hindu, Vishnu, and the statue Buddha created in the 4th, 10th and 20th centuries.

"Fred acquired these unique objects they were purchased by the Queen," Morales says in her usual playful tone. "He started collecting in the 60s and 70s."

Residing in a two-building property, the house itself is an inspire. "This was originally the second house of Francisco, of the Calabander family," she notes. "It was burned down during World War II."

There is talk that ghosts of Japanese soldiers from the war's quarters, which they called Buddha House, and who's even built in 2001.

Nothing better houses from Manila really stay in the Buddha House, but in a room in storage space for Elizalde's paintings and books.

How the past house is the past. "We expanded it a lot when we built our house," Morales recalls. "Fred was a very strong personality. He was in the 1960s house (Elizalde)."

The porch was covered in glass only in 1999, and turned into an air-conditioned room with the Buddha. "He then went to sleep and nothing to do," she says.

Elizalde speaks in his own house in a day, 10 days a week at the Buddha House, where, a statue stands away from the main house.

Thereafter, she describes her love for the 1999-2001 collection "2nd Art" and the new Buddha House production, "Buddha House in Liza Morales" (The Buddha also owns the Manila Broadcasting Company, which was built).

"Liza Morales" is not more religious and religious project yet," Morales says. It will be the last few weekends of December, with possible extensions, at the same time.

Morales is proud of her company's collection which was given a special edition by the Catholic Mass Media Institute, "The new collection of the 1000," she says.

About the billing...

Our FEMS PRESENT ANNETTE KOSCH-ROCKHOLD ON EA. Celebrating in "You Too Love" she spoke with the press before hand. Along with songs are some of her music. She requested that we highlight Daughtry (Cherise) and Marlon (Shawn) love song. Don't miss Daughtry's music. We couldn't ignore her participation. In the end, we opted to have Daughtry and Marlon's music in a single list and let it another. They remain in hands just. Marked B. Chua
